

You Think You're Perfect?—Read On

By Count Marco

I know a woman who is perfect. At least, that's her opinion; she knows what is right and what is wrong with everybody, and proceeds to let them know. She has what I consider a complete lack of that most important social grace, consideration for the other person.

How many times have I heard her, at parties or in small groups, express an unasked-for opinion. How many times have I seen a look of interest turn to hurt bewilderment, then finally to intense dislike for this particular woman after she has unloaded her unwanted comments.

She is the kind who, like so many of you, looks at a man's tie and proceeds to tell him the knot is wrong, the pattern is wrong or the cut is wrong. As a tie expert she is proud of the fact she can tell every poor man how stupid he is and how much smarter she is.

She is the "Oh, I wish you had told me" type of person, too, who knows whether your newest purchase could have been bought for much less money. If she likes anything at all it is always with reservations.

As a makeup expert she simply must comment on yours, followed by a remark of, "My dear, don't you think that particular shade is wrong for your coloring?"

The new dress you proudly wear into the room for the first time causes her to say in a louder-than-foghorn whisper, "Isn't that a little young for you, darling?"

As an interior decorator she decides your furniture is placed all wrong; as a parent she is willing to volunteer a great number of "If they were MY children" comments.

I watch her closely from across the room, and never do I see her eyes spend any time with one person. They flee around the room from object to person and back again like a nervous fly dodging the swatter.

Don't be this person. If you do nothing else this year but keep your mouth shut and your opinions to yourself, you'll be a far greater person for it.

If someone does ask an opinion, please try to remember they don't want criticism, constructive or otherwise. They want encouragement and happiness, and the happiness comes with a simple, "I like it." And you should like it if it makes the other person happy. Such is the making of a true friendship.

CHEERS AND ALL THAT... Larry Worch, as Ross, the family friend, shares a refresher with Rosemary Buell, as Content, the patient wife, in "Marriage Go Round" which will be presented Friday and Saturday, closing date, at the Chapel Theatre, 4164 Pacific Coast Highway. Reservations may be made for the adults only comedy, which boasted SRO last weekend, by calling FR 2-9636. Dick Miller has the role of the erring husband and Alma Nelson helps him along the forbidden path.

has a capacity for 3,000 employees and is one of the best located and equipped plants in the Los Angeles County area, Rutherford told the Torrance delegation. He said a change of ownership would be better for Torrance than to keep the plant operating for Ryan with a working force of 150 persons or less.

Making the trip were Mayor Albert Isen; Martin Denn, president of the Chamber of Commerce; Don Reining, Chamber of Commerce manager; and O. P. Johnson of the city manager's office.

RYAN OFFICIALS said the plant would be "very much in demand" in the event Ryan closed its operations here, the delegation reported.

Ryan officials earlier announced plans to remove their operations here and concentrate them in San Diego where their principal facilities are located.

Some personnel from the local plant is being transferred to San Diego and a complete shutdown of operations has been scheduled tentatively for May 1.

COMPANY officials expressed regret at the necessity to leave Torrance and expressed gratitude to the city for the support received here, according to officials who made the trip Friday.

Ryan executives had said the reduction in military contracts had brought about the need to close the local facility.
